This Privacy Policy describes the information ReWriting collects from Users when they visit www.rewriting.ai (the “Website”), how ReWriting uses that information, and under what circumstances ReWriting may or does disclose that information. This Privacy Policy should be read in conjunction with the rewriting.ai Terms of Service also available on the Website at <https://www.rewriting.ai/docs/terms.pdf>.

1. Changes to Privacy Policies.

ReWriting’s Privacy Policy is subject to change from time to time, so ReWriting suggests that User reviews the current Privacy Policy at the start of each visit to the Website. Unless ReWriting clearly expresses otherwise, ReWriting will use information in accordance with the Privacy Policy under which User Information, as defined below, was collected, and User accepts and agrees to ReWriting’s practices as described herein. USER IS HEREBY ADVISED THAT USER’S CONTINUED USE OF THE WEBSITE CONSTITUTES USER’S ACCEPTANCE OF ANY AMENDMENTS TO AND THE MOST RECENT VERSION OF THIS PRIVACY POLICY AND THE WEBSITE’S TERMS OF SERVICE.

Information ReWriting Collects.

When User uses the Website, ReWriting may receive and collect certain information. The information that ReWriting may receive and collect depends on what User does when it visits the Website.

1. Automatically Collected Information.

Some information is automatically received and sometimes collected from User when User visits the Website. This information may include some or all of the following items: (i) the name of the domain and host from which User accesses the Internet, including the Internet Protocol (IP) address of the computer User is using and the IP address of User’s Internet Service Provider; (ii) the type and version of Internet browser software User uses and its operating system; (iii) the date and time User accesses the Website, the length of User’s stay and the specific pages, images, video or forms that User accesses while visiting the site; (iv) the Internet address of the website from which User linked directly to the Website, and if applicable, the search engine that referred User and any search strings or phrases that User entered into the search engine to find the Website; and (v) demographic information concerning the country of origin of User’s computer and the language(s) used by it. ReWriting uses this information to monitor the usage of the Website, assess its performance, ensure technological compatibility with Users’ computers, and understand the relative importance of the information provided on the Website.

ReWriting may also use this data to conduct statistical analyses on Users' usage patterns and other aggregated data.

Information Collected via Cookies.

"Cookies" are small files or records that are placed on User's computer to distinguish User from other visitors to the Website. The use of cookies is a standard practice among websites to collect or track information about User's activities while using the Website. Generally, a Cookie may enable a website owner to track how a visitor navigates through the website and the areas in which visitors show interest. This is analogous to a traffic report: it tracks trends and behaviors but does not identify individuals. Information gathered in this fashion may include date and time of visits, pages viewed, time spent at the Website, and the website visited just before and just after a visit to the Website. Cookies can be set to expire: (i) on a specified date; (ii) after a specific period of time; (iii) when a transaction has been completed; or (iv) when a User turns off his/her Internet browser. A Cookie that is erased from memory when a visitor's Internet browser closes is called a "session" cookie whereas Cookies which expire based on a time set by the Web server are called "persistent" cookies. The Website may use both "session cookies" and "permanent cookies," as well as session tracking technology (e.g., InspectLet) which analyzes user behavior when on the Website. Internet browsers are typically set to accept Cookies by default. User can choose to have its browser warn User every time a Cookie is being sent to User or User can turn off Cookie placements. If User refuses Cookies, there may be parts of the Website which may not function properly.

3.

Information User May Actively Submit Through the Website.

For some of the browsing on the Website, ReWriting neither requires nor collects "User Information," which is information communicated by User to ReWriting generally for use by ReWriting in contacting User, e.g., User's name and email address. User can browse the Website and take as much time as User wants to review the Website without having to submit such User Information. In the following instances, however and without limitation, User will be required to submit User Information: (i) when User wants to contact ReWriting via email or Website contact forms; (ii) when User registers an account on the Website; or (iii) as necessary to process transactions entered into via the Website. E-mail or other forms of electronic communication, including contact form submission, are inherently not a secure and/or confidential means of communication. Information that is provided to ReWriting as a "Submission," as that term is used in the Website Terms of Services, is not "User Information" as that term is used in this Privacy Policy, and ReWriting may handle Submission information in its sole discretion.

3. Personal Information About Children.

The Website is targeted primarily for use by adults. ReWriting does not target or create special areas for use by children. Accordingly, ReWriting does not knowingly collect age identifying information, nor does ReWriting knowingly collect any personal information from children under the age of 13 years. In the event that ReWriting discovers that a child under the age of 13 has provided personally identifiable information to ReWriting, in accordance with the Children's Online Privacy Protection Act (please see the Federal Trade Commission's website at <http://www.onguardonline.gov/articles/0031-protecting-your-childs-privacy-online> for more information about this Act. ReWriting will delete the child's personally identifiable information from ReWriting's files to the extent possible.

When User sends an email to ReWriting or provides User's email address to ReWriting, User is communicating with ReWriting electronically and consents to receive communication from ReWriting electronically. ReWriting may retain the content of such email(s), User's email address, and ReWriting response(s) in order to further service User's needs. ReWriting may use the data that User provides to send User email or correspondence via other means.

How ReWriting Uses and Shares User Information.

ReWriting may use User Information that User actively submits to better assist User when User visits or contact ReWriting again and to send User special offers which may be of interest to User. ReWriting may do this by general marketing communications for the Website or related services, including by e-mail, (collectively, "Marketing Communications"). Unless User "opts-out" through opportunities available to User through ReWriting's Marketing Communications, ReWriting may send User Marketing Communications. User may also "opt-out" of future Marketing Communications by following the instructions provided in this Privacy Policy under the "Access to and Managing User Information" section of this Privacy Policy. Access to and Managing User Information.

ReWriting believes it is important for User to be able to: (i) find out what Information User has provided to ReWriting through the Website; (ii) update User Information; and (iii) "opt out" of receiving future ReWriting Communications. To inquire about User Information, update User Information, or "opt" out of receiving future ReWriting Communications, User may do one of the following:

- 2.

Send an e-mail with User's request and current contact information to info@rewriting.ai. If User sends an e-mail request, User should include its full name and email address, and indicate the specific nature of User's request. If User wants to "opt in" or "opt out" of receiving ReWriting communications, specifically what type of ReWriting communication (e.g., e-mail) User wishes to receive or stop receiving. This will ensure ReWriting identifies User correctly in ReWriting's systems and accurately processes User's request. Until that change takes effect, User may still receive or not receive ReWriting Communications. "Opting-out" of ReWriting Communications may prevent ReWriting from providing certain services which may be necessary for User's use of the Website or services provided thereon.

8.

What User Needs to Do to Protect its Information.

User has several options when deciding how it can best protect User Information. One option is simply not to volunteer it. As stated above, this approach would allow User to still visit the Website, although it will prevent User, for example, from utilizing services or materials provided via the Website or providing ReWriting with User's comments or questions relating to the Website. The Federal Trade Commission's website, www.ftc.gov, also offers useful information about how to protect personally identifiable information provided to a website.

If at any time User believes that ReWriting has not adhered to the policies and principles set forth in this Privacy Statement, please notify ReWriting using the contact information provided in Section 7(b). ReWriting will make all commercially reasonable efforts to promptly respond to such concerns.

10.

Do-Not-Track.

To the extent do-not-track implementations from User's browser(s) prevent or impede the delivery of services provided through ReWriting.ai, those do-not-track implementations are not honored.

11.

Questions or Comments.

If User have any questions or comments concerning ReWriting's Privacy Policy, please contact ReWriting using the information provided in Section 7(b).
